1. General introduction

A number of important initiatives in the field of police and judicial cooperation are provided for in the "The Stockholm Programme - an open and secure Europe serving and protecting citizens" endorsed by the European Council on 10-11 December 2009 for the period 2010 to 2014. The Treaty of Lisbon has given national Parliaments a special role in these fields, for example in the evaluation of Eurojust's activities (Article 85 paragraph 1 TFEU) and in the scrutiny of Europol's activities (Article 88 paragraph 2 TFEU).

Against this background, the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs and the Committee on Legal Affairs of the European Parliament decided to invite Members of national Parliaments to an inter-parliamentary committee meeting on the Stockholm Programme: State of play regarding police and judicial cooperation in civil and criminal matters.

This meeting is intended to provide a forum for the exchange of views between national Parliaments and the European Parliament on these matters. Its timing will allow the use of the conclusions and insights of the meeting for the upcoming legislative procedures on Europol and Eurojust as well as for the evaluation of the Stockholm Programme which the Committees on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs, on Legal Affairs and on Constitutional Affairs are jointly carrying out.

Enhancing Europol and strengthening its cooperation with national law enforcement authorities under proper parliamentary oversight

The fight against cross-border serious and organised crime can only be carried out effectively in the EU through close cooperation between national judicial and law enforcement authorities. Amongst the different cooperation and information exchange mechanisms, Europol plays a central role as an information hub. In March 2013, the European Commission proposed a new legal framework for Europol (COM(2013)173), making the agency more flexible in processing information, with more rigorous data protection requirements, and placed it under the clear parliamentary oversight of the European Parliament together with national Parliaments.

Possible topics during this session could include:

- Is the current level of EU police cooperation (and its data protection safeguards) satisfactory, and if not, how should it be enhanced?
- Is the recently proposed Europol Regulation (including the proposed merger between Europol and CEPOL) a positive development, and what could be improved in the proposal?
- How, in practice, should the European Parliament and national Parliaments exercise their joint parliamentary oversight of Europol and national law enforcement authorities?

11.25 - 12.30	SESSION II - Judicial cooperation in criminal matters Developing a criminal justice area under the Lisbon Treaty with regard to Eurojust and the European Public Prosecutor's Office
----------------------	---

If fighting cross-border crime can only be undertaken effectively in the EU through close cooperation between national law enforcement authorities, this cooperation needs to be enhanced and, at the same time, coupled with measures aiming at protecting fundamental rights. Eurojust and the future European Public Prosecutor's Office (EPPO) have a central role in this respect.

The European Commission has announced the presentation of the proposals for two regulations, on Eurojust and the EPPO, which are scheduled to be published in the near future.

Possible topics for discussion could include:

- What could be improved in the judicial cooperation framework?
- What are the priority issues to be considered in the future proposals on Eurojust and the EPPO?
- How, in practice, should the European Parliament and national Parliaments carry out their joint parliamentary evaluation of Eurojust ?

15.00 - 16.30	SESSION III - Judicial cooperation in civil matters
----------------------	--

In recent years, the European Union has made great progress in passing legislation to resolve problems that arise in cross-border civil law relations, covering contracts, judgments, family law and other areas. The Stockholm Programme provided for a number of initiatives which relate to family law. However, in view of the unanimity requirement in Council for such legislation, family law legislation has often been the most difficult to agree on. Citizens who move across borders would greatly benefit from such legislation.

In this session, Members of the European Parliament involved in such matters will report on their experience with ongoing and recent legislation.

Discussions could focus on:

- The extent to which the European Union should pass legislation to cover cross-border issues in the field of family law, and the advisability of using the tools provided by the Treaties such as enhanced cooperation and the "passerelle" clause. The question also arises as to whether the Stockholm Programme was too ambitious in view of the EU's current legal framework.

Moderator: Tadeusz ZWIEFKA, MEP, Rapporteur on enhanced cooperation in the area of the law applicable to divorce and legal separation

- 15.10 - 15.20 Alexandra THEIN, MEP, Rapporteur on the two proposals on jurisdiction, applicable law and recognition and enforcement of decisions regarding matrimonial property regimes and registered partnerships

16.40 - 18.30	SESSION IV - Tools for the effective development of a European judicial culture

The European Parliament has, in the past, noted that a real European judicial culture is necessary if citizens are to be given the full benefits of their rights under the Treaties. One of the most important elements in this regard is training, particularly in the legal field. The European Parliament and the Commission have launched a pilot programme covering best practices in the field of legal training.

Furthermore, the European Commission has recently published the new EU Justice Scoreboard, COM(2013) 160, which compares the civil and administrative justice systems of the Member States and notes where there is room for improvement.

Discussions could focus on:

- the best means of ensuring awareness of Treaty rights amongst citizens and legal professionals;
- how to maintain the highest standards in the justice systems of the Member States.
